MUSEUM HISTORY

In 1930, Edward Severin Clark built a Neo-Georgian mansion on property once owned by famed author James Fenimore Cooper. Originally called Fenimore House, it was constructed as a private residence and then served as the home of the New York State Historical Association (NYSHA) beginning in 1944. For fifty years, the Fenimore House showcased the collections of NYSHA. In 1995, the name was changed to Fenimore Art Museum and the building underwent a major renovation—the addition of a new wing to house the Thaw Collection of American Indian Art. Since that time, Fenimore has presented changing exhibitions each season focusing on American art as well as its own long-standing collections.
